4:48

4:48 was the given title to the album, which is the time when the majority of people commit suicide.

The whole record deals with this issue. Unlike any other record ever produced, this one guides us through single events in one person's life; or the ones happening the last few hours...

From early at night at 1:17am, with a self-examination; through the actual social breakdown at 1:46am. At 2:16am the black thoughts of being lonely arise. The shame and the guilt. The agony and, later, the frustration takes an unpleasant turn at 4:38am.

This goes on until the clock eventually turns 4:48.

The album has a sound that makes the listener recognize the band. The music has developed into something new, and thanks to the new members, the band has been taken to a whole new level, that weren't possible before. The music is harder and more metal, but still has a base of crust in it.
